Friday 18th September 2026

£15

A Victorian Masterpiece. At Biddulph Grange Garden you can take on a global journey, from Egyptian pyramids, a Himalayan Glen through an Italian Garden to a Victorian vision of China. The garden features collections of rhododendrons, a stunning Dahlia Walk (at its best in September), and the oldest Golden Larch in Britain, just to name a few. It's also home to the country's oldest Stumpery, an unusual display of upside-down oak tree roots.

There is a tearoom which has a variety of hot and cold drinks on offer, as well as a full menu including a delicious array of cakes and bakes. The Shop includes a well-stocked Plant Centre, filled with seasonal plants inspired by the planting within the garden.

The gardens are set on a hill side, there are many steps and differing gradients, which may be a problem to members with walking difficulties.

The gardens are free if you are a National Trust member, however if you are not a member, admission to the gardens is £14 which you will have to pay at the garden entrance on the day.

We will be leaving Marple at 1000 arriving just after 1100. We will spend two and a half hours in the gardens and tea room, departing at 1330 and returning home around 1430

You can pay by cash, cheque or card
